CREATIVE BRAINS

In childhood's summer, days stretched wide,
Beneath the sun, where dreams abide.
Fields of green, and skies so blue,
Where every moment felt brand new.
Barefooted, we'd run through meadows bright,
Chasing butterflies in golden light.
Laughing freely, without a care,
With sun-kissed cheeks and wind-tousled hair.
Ice cream dripped, with sticky delight,
Under the shade of trees so right.
Climbing high, in forts we'd make,
In secret places, our refuge we'd take.
Splashing in streams, with friends so dear,
Creating memories, year after year.
Each day an adventure, waiting to unfold,
In the storybook world, where dreams behold.
Childhood's summer, forever in our heart,
A time of innocence, where we'd depart,
To wander freely, in nature's embrace,
In childhood's summer, a sacred space.
