Report

On 22nd January 2022, a lecture was organised by the NSS unit of MGMDCH about India fights cyber violence against women and children. Cyber bullying and other forms of peer-to-peer violence can affect young people each time they log in to social media or instant messaging platforms. The increasing reach of the internet, the rapid spread of mobile information, and the widespread use of social media, has led to the emergence of cyber violence against women and girls (VAWG) as a growing global problem with potentially significant economic and societal consequences. The NSS volunteers attended this session online.
