The book collection in special library which developed for academic curriculum for dentistry students and faculty. Gifted or donated books play vital role in relaxation of readers in such a special libraries. A gifted or donated Book makes great gifts because they can be thoughtful, and sometimes also thought-provoking. Like a card they can convey sentiment, feelings of humor; but they are so much more than a card! They can help people to say things that may they otherwise find so hard to put into words. are better than many other gifts; they don't make you fat, they don't wilt, one-size-fits-all, and they are a lot more interesting than socks. Books are such fabulous value for money, and can last a lifetime. (And really good books really don't need to be discounted!) Good books can create good 'retail theatre'. People love looking at highly visual books. People can be amused and entertained by humorous, quirky, witty titles. Good books can prompt ideas that change the way we think and can make a difference helping to make life better and more interesting. Sometimes, when creatively cross-merchandised around your shop, books help provide a context – a signpost – for the surrounding products that you are selling. This can mean that books help you to sell other products – or simply that you will get an add-on impulse sale for a book, as well as the other products you are already selling. Sometimes the best way to display books is all together, en masse, helping you to create a retail statement, a destination, a 'gift book' concept. Books can increase customer 'dwell time' in your shop. The longer people are captivated by (and so anchored in) your shop, the stronger the likelihood that they – or their companions – will buy something. The right books can help tell your story. They can help you to define what makes your retail environment different and special.
